If every country locality is furnishing as many logs to be worked up into finishing lumber as this section, the shortage on finishing lumber will be remedied before many more seasons. Some of the largest and nicest oak logs have been shipped out of here the past spring and summer that we have ever seen go out. Many carloads have been shipped from here; the railroad yards are full, awaiting cars for shipment. Along the track on Mansfield avenue, they are piling them up until they are crowding the public highway and soon will be a menace to the traveling public. Still they are bringing them in every day, giving employment to a good many men, teams, and leaving a good bunch of money in the territory.

The parking of automobiles has become a perplexing question to the local legislative body, and to handle the matter in a satisfactory manner to suit everybody is a little more than they will probably try to do. There should be restrictions but not such that would drive them from the town. Let them park wherever they will, so long as they are not a menace to life or property. One thing, however, they should be made to do, and that is keep back from the fire plugs. On Saturday nights, the machines are wedged in against the fire plugs and, should there be a fire, it would be impossible to attach the hose to the plug. A few fines for such offenses would help the city treasury and act as a reminder to the violators.
